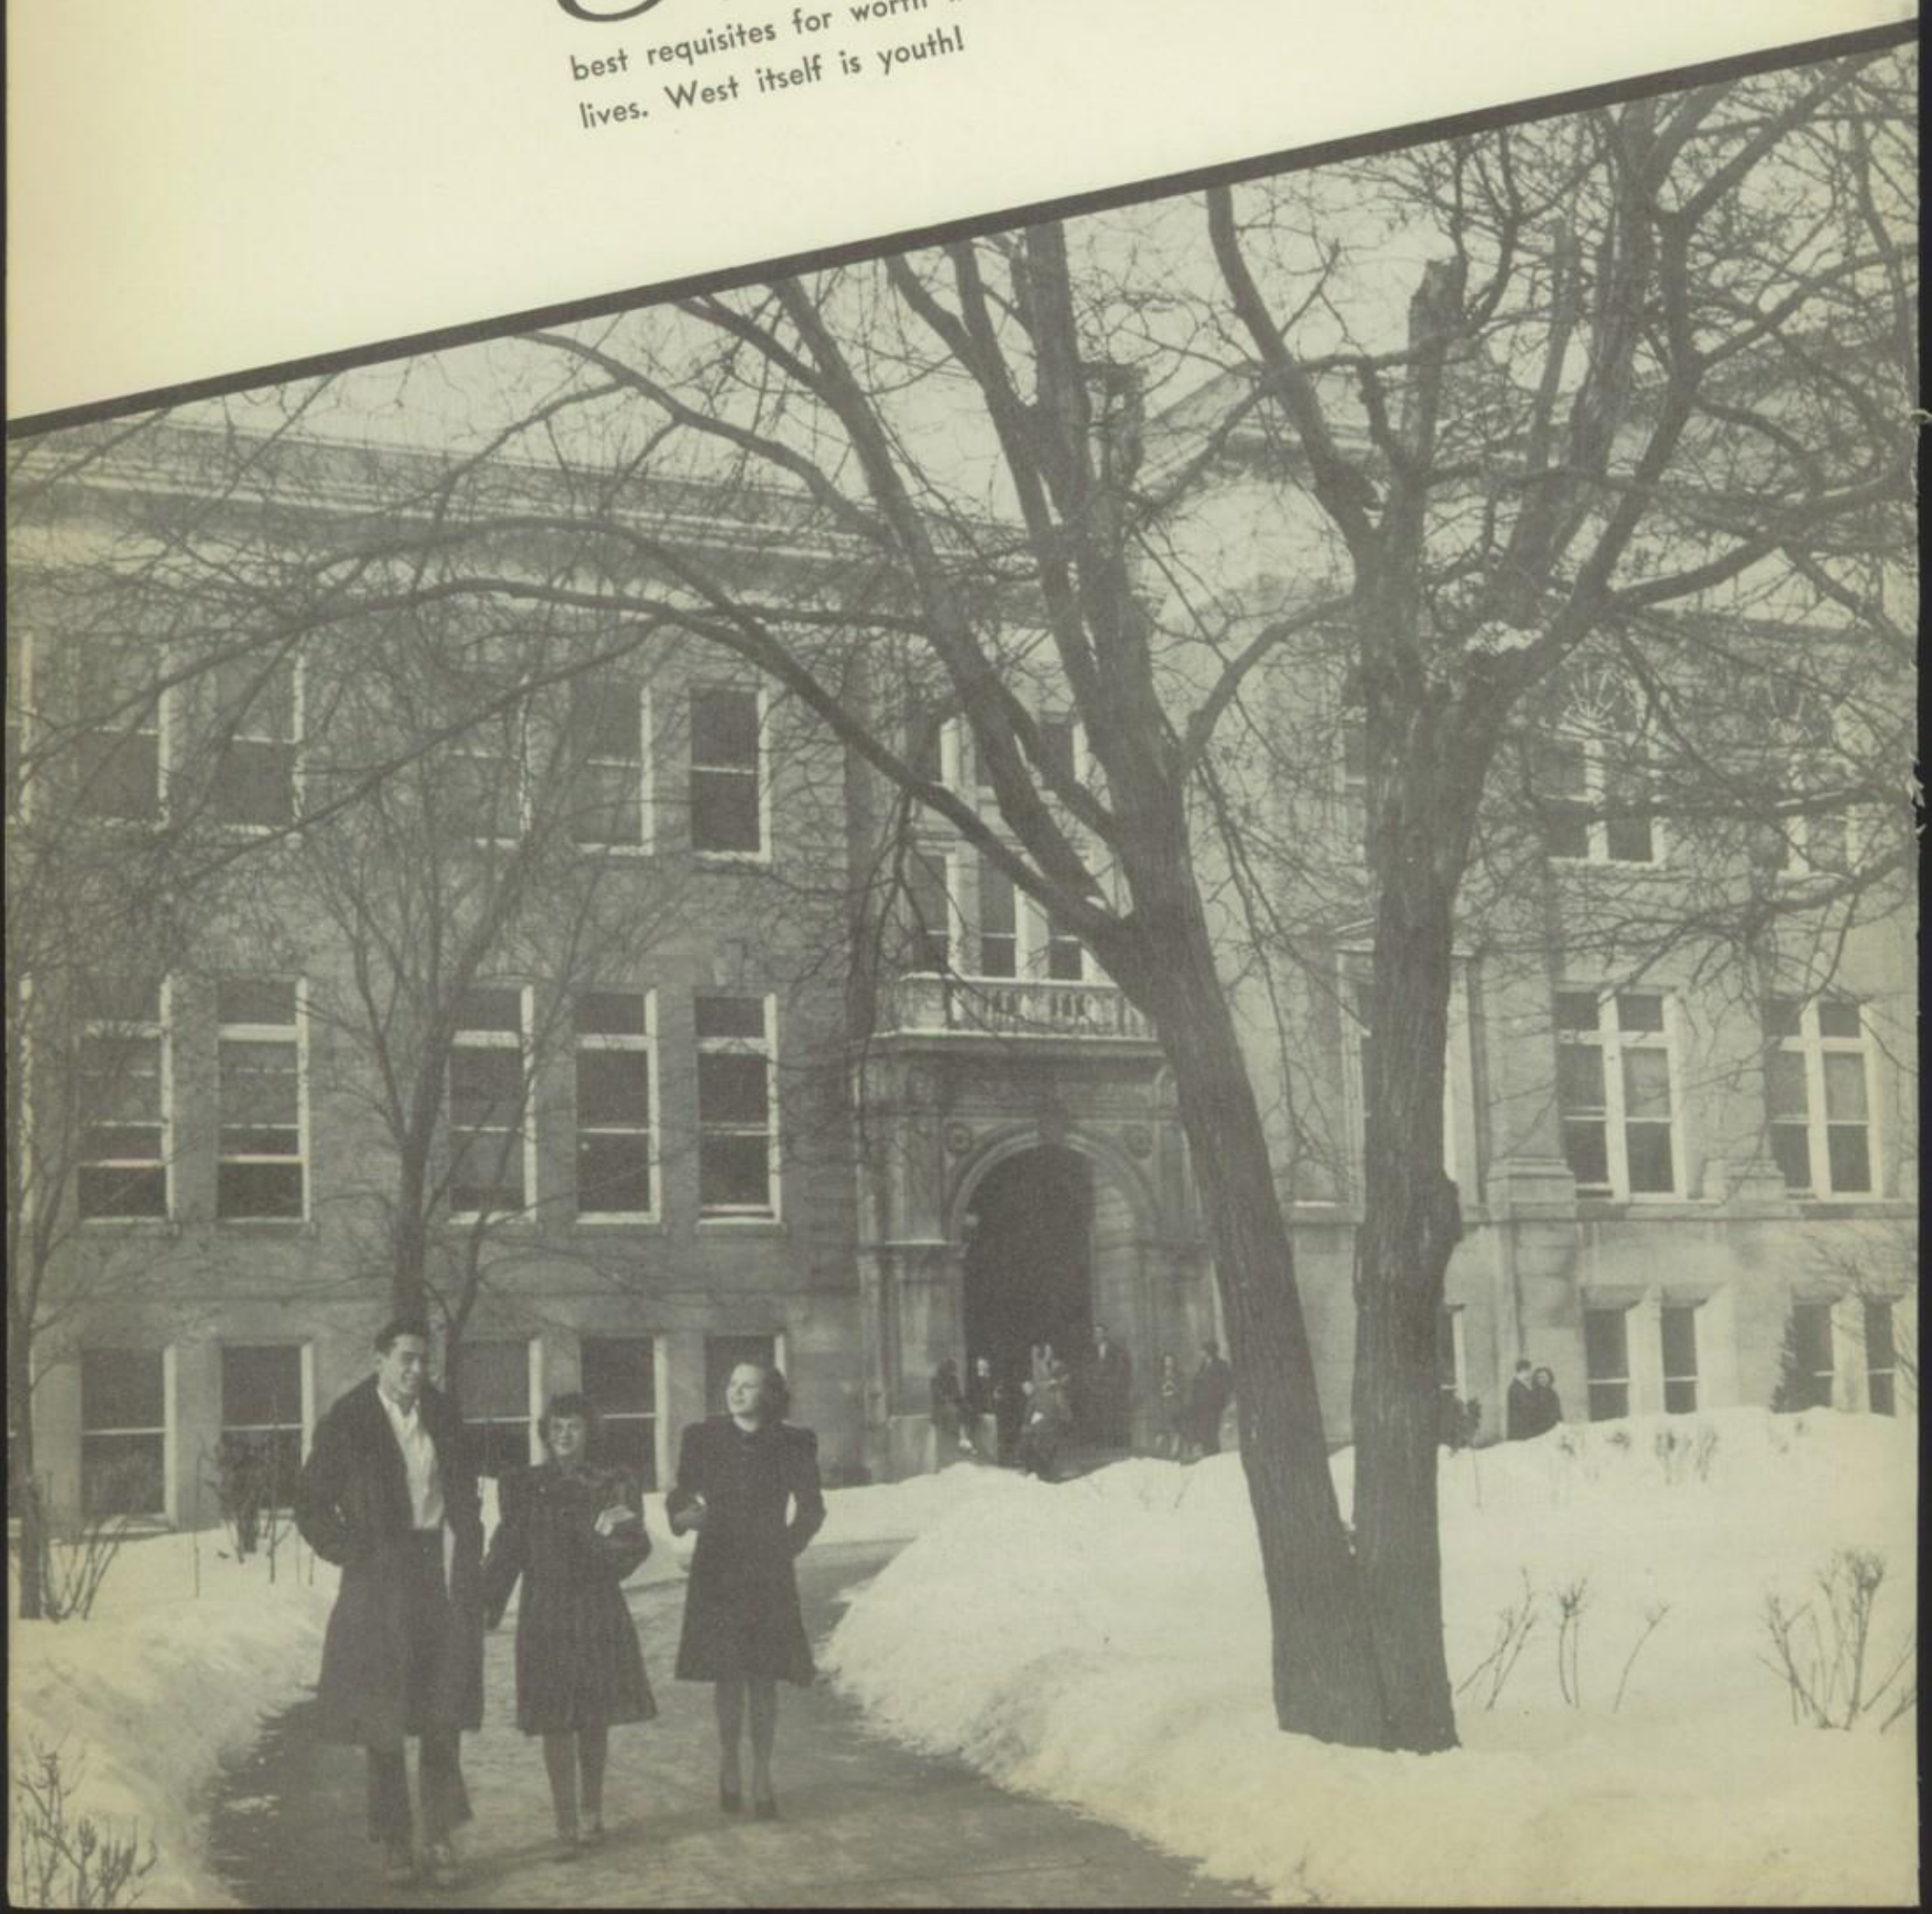
YOUND in West's domain are the young, the eager, the ambitious. Into these growing Americans, West strives to inculcate the best requisites for worth while living and happy future lives. West itself is youth!



HAVE YOU EVER WALKED ALONE on a wide, empty field and watched a dot in the sky become an airplane? Alone there, beneath the endless sky, perhaps you suddenly recalled stories of falling bombs. The dot whirred into a roar. A momentary terror clutched you. The airplane again became a dot. You laughed with relief. "This is America," you said. "We need fear no bombers." In that one instant of terror, you delved into the soul of a warring world—you felt what it means not to be an American.

America is a happy country. We laugh as planes fly overhead. We are not afraid. We are Americans! Ours is a land of strength and freedom. Ours is a land of wonderful potentialities. Ours is a land of high ideals.

As young Americans, we look upon the sad state of world conditions with solemn, reflective meditation. We lament the conditions; and yearningly long to assist those peoples in whose lives there is no laughter—only tears, when a plane soars above.

We earnestly hope that we may help to promulgate a world of laughter, peace, and constructive progress for the unhappy souls of a war-weary world. We hope that we may never lose sight of America's ideals—that we may always "Speak, Think, Act, Live, and Be Americans."

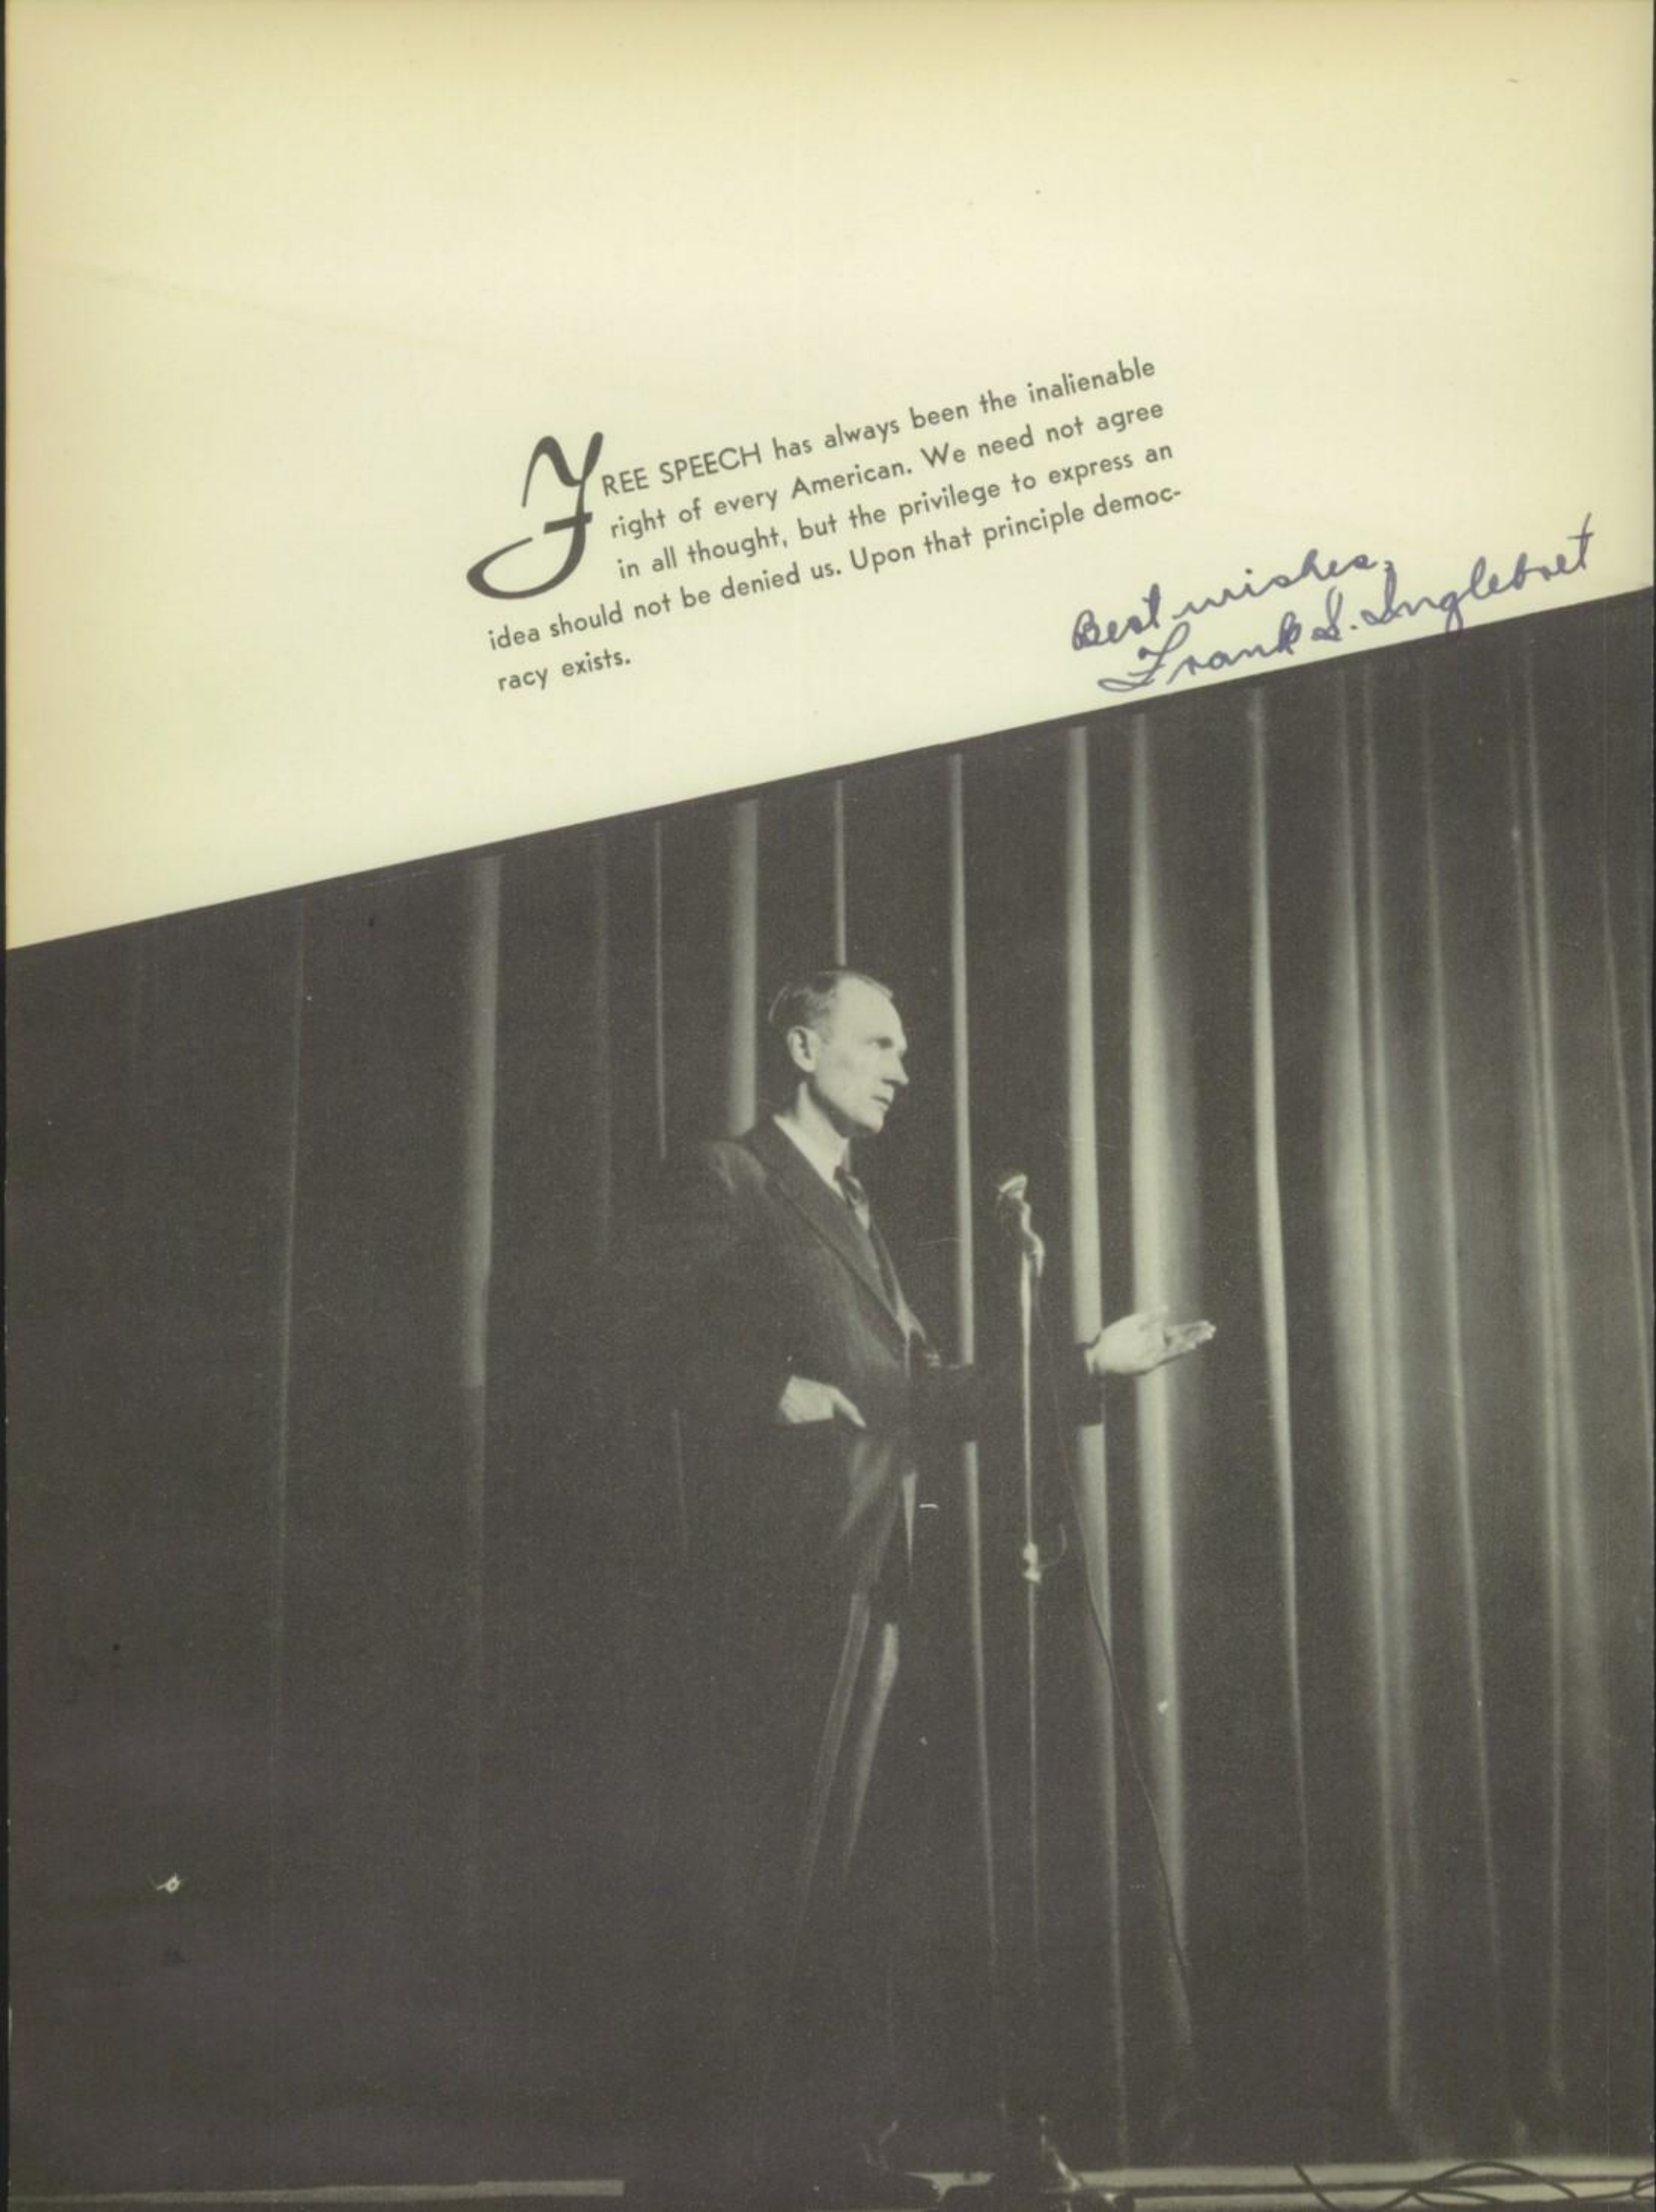
American

FREE SPEECH has always been the inalienable right of every American. We need not agree in all thought, but the privilege to express an idea should not be denied us. Upon that principle democracy exists.

Best wishes,
Frank L. Inglebret



FROM WEST, a crucible for the fusing and forming of ideas and ideals, is produced tomorrow's adult. Adulthood, itself, is no accomplishment if accompanied by that ignorance which brings mental stagnation. Tomorrow's adult, therefore, must be zealously trained. His ideals and ideas must be nurtured, encouraged, and tempered constantly. For, as Alexander Pope has said:

"'Tis education forms the common mind;
Just as the twig is bent, the tree's inclined."

West is teeming with young blood eager to conquer new worlds. Willing, yea eager, that young people might glean every possible bit of knowledge from their classes, members of the faculty strive unceasingly to prepare youth for a happy and useful future. Realizing that our youth is tomorrow's America, our instructors are indefatigable in their endeavors to found an intelligent and enlightened generation.

Faculty members may not be immortalized in history; monuments may not be erected in their honor. Yet these unsung heroes, our teachers, steadily move onward—ever giving, ever creating an invulnerable armour of knowledge in order that today's youth shall develop tomorrow's America to its fullest potentialities.

Faculty Trains Youth

WEST is like a democracy—with each instructor a representative, each student a constituent. Executives in this representative democracy are Mr. N. B. Schoonmaker, Miss Agnes Holt, and Mrs. Malva Lockwood. Facilitating in the manipulation of maneuvers are the clerks, the visiting teacher, and the school nurse.

These representatives, seventy-four of them, are also the constructors: builders of patriotism, reliability, truthfulness, courage, confidence, and perseverance, the qualities necessary for youth's grip of world actualities. These faculty members strive to inculcate the best into each student, to instill in each student intelligent loyalty, practical knowledge, and worth while endeavors.

With such excellent training, how can the youth of today, the leaders of tomorrow, fail?

English Inculcates Desires

NARY A DAY goes by but what some poor chap in creative writing or journalism is certain to sigh: "Oh, for an inspiration!" He yearns to express himself. In speech classes, frequent reminders that "there are places for people who talk to themselves" fail to daunt mumbling students absorbed in memorizing lines. They, too, want to express themselves.

The beginning of such yearnings probably originated in a regular English class where grammar, spelling, literature, and composition are customarily taught.

English is not so versatile as music, the universal language. But, like music, its effect depends wholly on the listener's interpretation. The English Department's responsibility is to guide American youth in interpreting and using their language effectively. Its instructors teach the students to make both speech and pen "mightier than the sword."

Social Science for Progress

THE AMERICAN WAY OF LIFE—its ideals, struggles, achievements, endeavors, and objectives are familiar to social science students. In this department such subjects as European and American history, economics, sociology, and international relations are taught.

What is the importance of the Tigris-Euphrates Valley? How was West Virginia founded? How much gold does Uncle Sam keep at Fort Knox, Kentucky? What is the Elberfeld System? What is a "Sphere of Influence"? The mystery surrounding these questions disappears quickly for students familiar with social science. They dig into the past and learn why things are as they are today.

As a result of the knowledge gained, they become better citizens. They realize that good citizenship involves enlightenment, a vigilant guardianship of liberties gained, and an undying zeal for progress toward higher standards of American living.

Language is Tie that Binds

A WORD is a tiny thing—a drop of ink, a shape of sound—yet it patterns the whole web of world chronology. It is the thread which connects one human mind with another. It is the straw which breaks the camel's back, so to speak; which makes the camel go through the needle's eye. All human understanding and misunderstanding hinges on its adequacy or inadequacy.

A word seals the fate of a nation. That fate may be peaceful or tumultuous. America wants a peaceful fate. A knowledge of Spanish, French, and German can formulate such a fate. Only with the faculty for mutual understanding promulgated by verbal expression can any nation hope to attain a friendly relationship with another.

Mathematics Trains Mind

A SEEMINGLY INFINITESIMAL decimal point sometimes results in the crash of a huge bridge. That same dot probably cost its careless maker his job and his reputation. There is no almost right—only right and wrong in mathematics. The decimal point is not placed at a certain position as a matter of whimsy, but as a matter of exacting study. Mathematics classes develop concise thinkers. The modern mechanized world depends upon such thought. Mathematicians supply that element in a machine age. Calculators create the machines so important in today's progress. Mathematics might be called the core of all scientific learning: without its preciseness, its exactness, and its skill, research in physics, chemistry, and engineering would be at a standstill.

Natural Science Can Explain

HYDROXYL ION, haemoglobin, metasilicates, electroscope . . . . not necessarily Greek; but terms important to students of the natural sciences. These and thousands of other words constitute a language that is used extensively in scientific research for the good of humanity.

Physics students study the earth's law of gravitation, the volume of gases, atmospheric pressures, or any of the numerous phases of the subject that interest the engineering mind. Nature provides so many interesting forms of life for biology students to observe. Chemistry explains the component elements of this terraqueous globe, why alcohol preserves those frogs you dissect in biology, why you use baking powder in cakes. Any of the natural science subjects provides many answers to perplexing problems that vex maturing minds. They take us beyond the outside, into the depths, to the real secret.

Learning Business Ways

KEYS TAPPING in quick response to fast moving fingers are heard in the typing room. Abbreviated lines and curves are transcribed and translated in shorthand classes. Numerical figures are compiled and juggled around by bookkeeping students. It's American business ways—speed, efficiency, accuracy—needed in modern offices of enterprise. West helps supply the demand for such workers.

THOSE TANTALIZING ODORS which sometimes inadvertently stray into classes may often be attributed to a cooking group. That modish dress of the girl across the aisle may often be traced for design to a sewing room. Domestic science teaches girls the arts of home-life. Around home welfare society evolves.

Constructing for Man's Needs

FINE PARTICLES OF SAWDUST wafted aloft permeate the industrial rooms with the aroma of pine and oak, sharp-biting saws swirl through blocks of wood, hammers clank, hot sparks fly as steel grates steel, and intent heads bend low over the tasks at hand—drawing, cutting, pounding. They learn to construct new artifices and abodes for man.

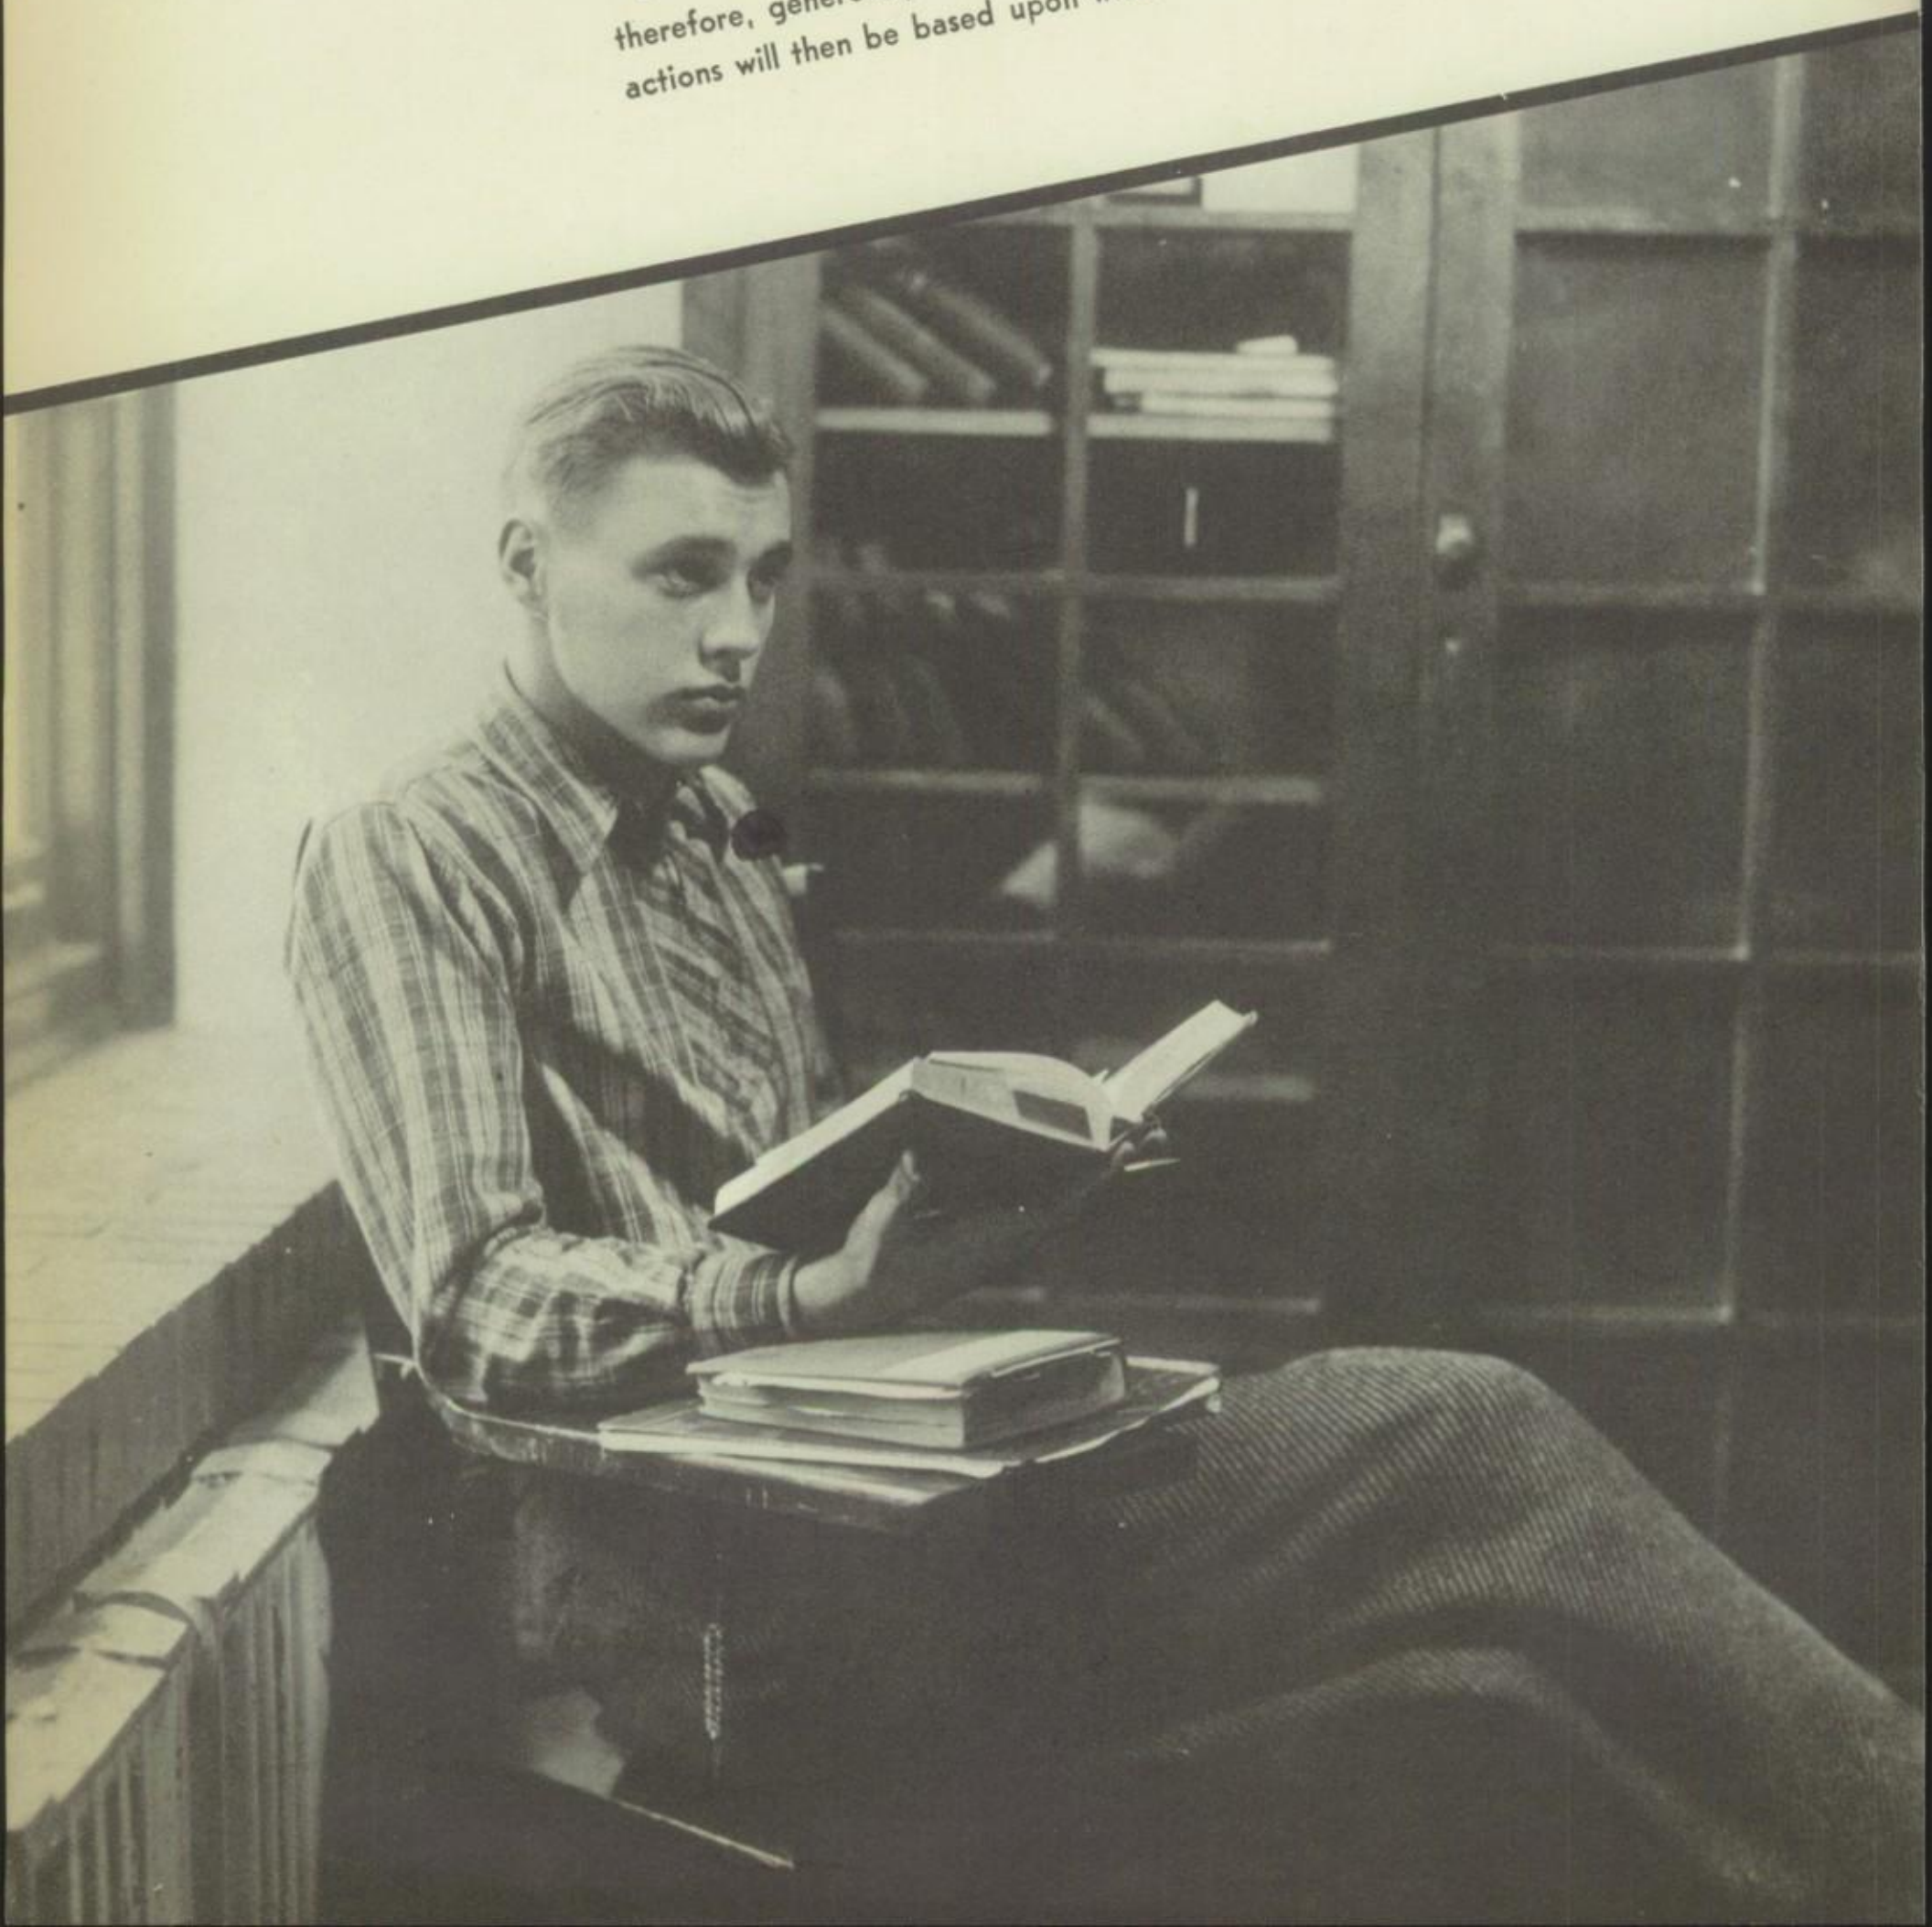
On the Bouncing Road to Buoyant Health

STUDENTS are taught to think, for those who think live. He who thinks two thoughts to another's one lives that much more. Think, therefore, generously, logically, honestly, keenly. Your actions will then be based upon wisdom.



Dear Alpine,
I know you will always be as sweet as you are now. I hope our friendship will always be the same.
Beverly

LITTLE TOTS a decade or so ago, who jealously clung to their mothers' hands as they toddled off to kindergarten, are little tots no longer. They are now the gangling adolescents of today wondering what to do after high school graduation. From carefree, purposeless little children laughing, crying, playing all day long, they have developed into youth of an age gleaning a purpose in life. They have learned in some degree to think; to use their own reasoning powers. Through learning they have been steeped continually in a world's background in order that they might profit from the knowledge and experience of their fathers.

The poised senior switching the tassel on his mortar-board cap and gravely accepting a high school diploma is indeed a marked contrast to the toddling child starting kindergarten so long ago. He is even a marked contrast to the gawky individual entering high school.

Completing high school, he will have approached nearer the adult stage. The privilege of voting will soon be his—that privilege of guiding, through his choice on the ballot, America's way of life. His wisdom in helping to guide America's destiny will be based upon his education. As an enlightened voter he will take a vital part in democratic government—really becoming an active and influential American in mind, soul, and body.

January Class Leaders

THESE TWO PAGES present the foremost leaders of the mid-year class of 1941. Class officers were Bruce James, president; Jane Enkema, vice president; June Hanson, secretary; and Robert Mattern, treasurer. Selected as Representative Seniors were Marylu Meighan, Bruce James, Annemarie Heynacher, and Robert Korsmo. Scholastic leaders were Berni Susskind, valedictorian; and Arthur Leemhuis, salutatorian. Further reading of this Hesperian will reveal the scope and quality of their leadership.

ACTIONS interpret our thoughts, reflecting life's happiness and fullness. As a firefly shines on the wing and darkens when idle, so our organizations shine when they're active—reflecting our studies, interests, and nobility of minds.

SHAKESPEARE once called youth, "My salad days: when I was green in judgment." Shakespeare knew that judgment came only with experience, with performance, with the trials and errors and tribulations that befall man in his pursuits of life.

Youth studies, thinks, and listens to the advice of his elders. Having done so, he is stimulated to act, to perform, and to achieve. As foods build the human body, so subjects taught at school build the human mind. To perfectly adjust that mind and body for a happy and harmonious existence, youth must develop coordination with the world's hum of activities. Through such coordination he will fit into the machinery of civilization successfully and without abrasion. He will become a part of that civilization, functioning as a necessary and vital unit in its advancement and effectiveness.

Practice in this necessary adjustment is found in the work within school organizations. Here youth takes the fundamental steps in the application of knowledge. His organizations make school a miniature world of reality. Through participation in the activities, he learns the rudiments of citizenship, cooperation, and leadership. He discovers his talents and develops his skills. He sharpens his mind and broadens his character and personality. He prepares himself to enter the world of reality, his green judgment gradually fading into the texture of ripened experience.

Service— Carelessness, a scream, a screeching of brakes, a crumpled body—a sequence of events not at all pleasant. To avert such tragedies, the Traffic Squad cautiously directs students crossing the streets at West . . . Candy or caramel apples —they taste their best at games or lunch time. Their sale by the Service Club supplies needed funds for school movies, athletics, and other activities . . . Voice of the student in school government is the Student Council. It also sponsors school auditoriums.

LIVING THE AMERICAN WAY—energetically and happily—demands good health and physical strength. Sports have been instituted in the schools on the firm conviction that requirements for successful modern living cannot be met by those unconditioned physically. Health or illness often mark the difference between success and failure today, so closely related are the physical and mental aspects of the human system.

Health, however, is not the only benefit to be derived from participation in sports. That certain love of fair play—that respect for the rules of the game—holds firm in every situation throughout life. Players learn to hit the line hard, but squarely; and to accept defeat courageously, determined to fight just a little bit harder the next time. Spectators may learn a rule as true in life as in the field of sports: each foul results in a penalty to the maker.

West encourages sports for all students. Its program is based upon a diversity of student needs and interests. Those mentally alert must be physically alert. Time need not be squandered because mental activities have sapped one's stamina. New vitality is regained in the program of sports—for greater thought, nobler living, better action.

Anything Can Happen

WHEN FOOTBALL GAMES are played crowds jam the bleachers, line the fences to get a glimpse of those Cowboys in action. Coaches, managers, and scrubs sit tense watching maneuvers from the bench. There's suspense and thrills as plays are executed in drives for touchdowns. Anything can happen in a gridiron tussle.

Football Retrospect—Sports have their ups and downs. In the 1940 season the uncertainties of football held full sway. Co-champions of the city league with Edison in the previous season, the loss of exceptional veteran players could not be overcome; hence, West marked down two victories, five losses, and one tie for the 1940 records. Scores were close, however; team spirit was high; and threats and reverses from week to week kept fans pacing the sidelines. An upset making streamers in downtown papers was West's victory over a league leading Edison team, 12-6. Gloom to Green and White Day merriment was South's 6-0 score over West. Joy to the hearts of Washburn fans was their team's first victory over West in five years, 25-13. Biggest Cowboy stampede was that 40-0 score over Patrick Henry near the close of the season.

Startling News—West's upset of the season: the defeat of Edison, knocking the Tommies from their league leading position. In a battle of mud, West was ahead, 12-0, at the half. Had the Tommy eleven been side-tracked from thoughts of football to those of duck-hunting? Fans thus wondered—until Edison scored in the fourth quarter. Yet the final score was 12-6 in West's favor.

Basketball Retrospect— Although West may not always capture top honors in a sport, they usually accomplish two things: improvement over the previous season and at least one good upset. The basketball team ran true to form in this tradition. They were a threat to any team's victory-bound inclinations and they toppled Edison, a league leading quintet, from championship hopes. Marshall, winners of the regular city schedule, and Washburn, playoff and regional winners, beat the Cowboy basketeers by only four and five points, respectively. Howie Schutz, guard, secured a place on the All-City Second Team. Mike Shout, Bruce Guetzloe, and Bud Weigent were given honorable mentions.

Swimming Retrospect—Ho, hum! Another season goes by, and the Cowboy Tank Team has its 14th consecutive city title in the water sport. Ho, hum! Coach Wickstrom anticipates an even better record next year. Biggest loss will be Keith Brueckner, record backstroke swimmer—and he finished last semester. In spite of Brueckner's loss, the Cowboy mermen splashed gallantly on, submerging the Marshall dreadnaught, and rolling over all other opponents. So, Hail West, Neptune of city prep aquatics!

Hockey Retrospect

WEST AGAIN PROVED its traditional strength in hockey by securing a second place in the city league, won by Roosevelt. The local stick wielders dropped only three games during the season in thirteen games played. Holy Cow! What games to lose. All games lost were by one measly point—to Marshall, Roosevelt, and St. Paul Harding.

These losses never daunted the Cowboy spirit, however. They took all other opponents—including such non-conference teams as Breck, Blake, Robbinsdale, and St. Louis Park.

Jim Jewett, Phil Thomas, Angus Grant, John Davison, and Warren Beson were the standout players keeping West next to the top during the entire 1940-41 season. Jewett was selected as an All-City defenseman.

Tumbling

MINNEAPOLIS really scored over St. Paul during the Twin City gymnastic meet, a feat for which the Cowboys can wave their ten-gallon hats in cheer. Five of the twelve Minneapolis boys were from West—Carl Berg, Dick Getchell, Bob Wansburough, Ray Hanson, and Jerry Weislow. At the Northwest meet, Herb Loken copped first place in Class B.

Wrestling

ALTHOUGH Western wrestlers were found at the bottom of the city heap when the season ended, it was not without a struggle. Lacking lightweight wrestlers, the team lost many matches. Yet excellent performances by available wrestlers kept spirit and enthusiasm high. Star performers were Chuck Brooks, Lyle Lundeen, Tom Corniea, Roland Marlow, Tom Mc-Govern.

Track Retrospect

TRADITIONALLY at the top in city and state track meets, West has been slightly under par in this respect during the past two years. However, every season produces a few stars threatening or breaking records under Coach Zavodsky.

This season, Ozzie Wyatt became the outstanding pole-vaulter in the city when he jumped eleven feet, nine inches, for a city indoor record at the Metropolitan meet early in April. Other Cowboy trackmen placing in the Metropolitan were John Wetzler, in the 440-yard race, and Jim Jewett, in the shotput.

Additional members of the team who also proved main point-getters in the 1941 season were Lawrence Russ, broad-jumper and relay runner; Pete Wallace, dashman and broad-jumper; and Captain Jim Lewis, 440-yard runner.

Baseball Retrospect

COACH DON HOUCK had plenty of lettermen returning to form the 1941 bat-and-ball Cowboys. Seven of the team had previously received awards for baseball participation. Leading this list was the hard-hitting, clever base-runner, Captain Howie Schutz.

Veteran outfielders were King Lane and Jack Snyder. Warren Beson, formerly a receiver, worked in the outer regions. Hurling power was above average, the team having Wes Belleson and Murray Campbell on the firing line, along with the very promising newcomer, Mel Bjornlie.

Catcher Jim Meyer passed his second spectacular year pulling in the fast ones. Werner Bauer, Bill Kinney, Bob Larson, Dick Scott, and Don Holker, last year's understudies, played commendable ball in the infield during the season.

Tennis — The city high school tennis title returned gloriously to West in 1940 as the Cowboy netsters trounced the defending champions of Central, 5-0. Fred Gulden went on to capture the state singles championship and then teamed with Don Gunnar to take the state doubles title. With only Bob Schmidt returning from last year's city and state winners, the 1941 squad faced a difficult task in their title defense.

Golf—For the second year, Washburn remained the lone obstacle to the Cowboy golfers in the city title quest. The 1940 veteran team bowed to the Millers in a closely contested match, 11½-9½, ascribed by sports writers as a meet unexcelled in high school circles. Inspired by the brilliant playing of Ed Leary, state amateur champion, this year's squad again kept on the heels of Washburn for city honors in the sport.

Girls' Sports—This is an age in which women enjoy equal rights with men. With this privilege has come the desire or need of women to earn their own way through life, often in competition with men. Individually as such, she can no longer be a delicate creature in a frilly gown. She must hustle about amid nerve-wracking strains facing economic realities. This requires health, strength, and fortitude. Realizing women's modern position in society, schools prescribe regular physical education courses for girls.

Charm is one of woman's greatest assets. Participation in sports is her easiest way to develop the litheness of body, the grace, and the rhythm of movement so desirable. Folk dancing, modern dancing, basketball, ring and ladder work, and horseback riding are just a few of the pleasant ways in which she may achieve this charm.

Girls' Sports—A diversity of sports for the wise and healthful use of leisure time has been the objective of Miss Kathryn Carey and Miss Frances Sandell, girls' physical education instructors. Such sports as shuffleboard, table tennis, and horseshoe make gym periods a delight. Gymnastic exercises keep girls prim and nimble.

Girls' Sports

—Ever larger, year by year, grows the program of sports for girls at West. No wonder the G. A. A. membership increases. Here's a program of sports that's all fun, all wisely educational. CAN YOU be American . . . in every way you speak, think, act, and live? It's a large order; but Lincoln so lived—and what man has done man can do. Be not mistaken . . . it's a privilege and a challenge to be American.

IN THE WORLD OF TODAY, nations struggle to defend or to promote various ideologies of government. Nations are pitted against each other, fighting for existence or dominating power. In America—this pot-pourri of nations, this half-brother to the world—we are united as one. We rose above state warfare, pledged allegiance to one flag, with liberty and justice for all.

As American citizens we may differ—enjoying different pastimes, voicing different opinions, seeking different goals. That's our privilege. However, we are alike in our beliefs of freedom of speech, freedom of worship, and of the right to happiness.

True, every American youth has not the same opportunities, the same favorable surroundings as those at West. There are spots where poverty, prejudice, and intolerance trammel the quest for happiness and contentment.

Therein lies the challenge—to make democracy so work that it needs no defense, that its greatest strength will be its march to perfection, its adjustment to changing needs, its ability to fulfill the promise of an abundant life. Let youth, therefore, be so educated in democratic progress that he shall speak, think, act, live, and be American every day in every way.

Auditoriums an Inspiration for Achievement

A DOUBLE BELL calls anticipating students to assemblies. These auditorium periods are always a welcome respite from the regular classroom routine. Performances, pep fests, lectures, movies, or music—they blend into the educational picture to produce youth of balanced mental and cultural backgrounds. At assemblies honors and awards are bestowed upon meritorious individuals, an inspiration to those who applaud the winner. Inspiration for achievement might well evaluate all auditoriums.

Those Who Yearn to Act

O, LIVES THERE A MAN or a woman who to himself hath not said: "I have the soul of an artiste! What has Clark Gable — or Carole Lombard, got that I haven't? My future most indubitably lies in the theater." It was for those souls who have this feeling that the all-school play, "The American Passport", was produced. Usually, dramatic opportunity knocks only at the seniors' doors. This year, under-classmen, as well as seniors, were recognized as having dramatic talent.

This Thriller Ended Happily

AS ARTHUR LEEMHUIS falls—silent, still, and dead — women scream and women faint. Emerson Greenberg, the copper, examines the crowd for a clue. There's a murderer lurking somewhere around 320 College Avenue. There's no necessity for alarm, however; it's only a scene from the January senior class play, "320 College Avenue". The murder hysteria subsides; the mystery is solved; the curtain falls. Thus ends this thriller of the January class—very happily for all participants.

Western Stars—Every school has its constellation of stars. In this respect, West is no exception. However, West's horizon always seems to include stars who are able to out-dazzle other satellites in city, state, and national fields. These students have wisely learned to do a thing extremely well, especially in the activities of writing, speaking, music, or athletics. A sampling of such Western stars are introduced on these two pages.

Wise Use of Leisure Time

THE BOY OR GIRL who has developed worth while hobbies has learned the wise use of leisure time. Society need not fear that such an individual will fall upon evil ways. Life to that person is too precious, too interesting to be squandered or wrecked. Hobbies relieve the strain and stress of routine duties, making extra hours pleasant and profitable.

A MOMENT'S PAUSE—a pause for a picture to bring back, years hence—a memory. That helpful janitor, those hours lolled in the sun, that vocational talk which kindled an ambition, the purchase of books or a ticket, giving Shakespearean plays in class, those top-flight faces posted in the Limelight, glances into the inside of the cafeteria, watching cooks in training, wondering who made the clever posters—all moments and faces ne'er to be forgotten—and, therefore, here caught.
